Fillerina no needle filler

This rapidly absorbed dermo-cosmetic filler, applied externally, is effective to fill in wrinkles and for the volume of cheekbones and lips

Its name says it all. Fillerina is a filler that is a cross between aesthetic medicine and skincare. This patented dermo-cosmetic solution is an effective and totally non-invasive filler for external use that is the most valid and fastest way to fight wrinkles and skin aging. It transforms the skin, correcting expression lines and even the most stubborn wrinkles. How does it work? Its gel with an extremely high content of hyaluronic acids (6 molecules with different molecular weight) is absorbed by various skin layers. The molecules of hyaluronic acid in Fillerina were tested ex vivo to verify their ability to penetrate the skin: the smallest ones (1000, 5000 and 50.000 Daltons) can reach the deepest layers of the skin and work in combination with heavier hyaluronic acid molecules. This concentrated dermo-cosmetic filler was specifically designed for at-home use. Applied externally and rapidly absorbed, it is particularly indicated for stubborn wrinkles and expression lines. Fillerina comes with a patented applicator that distributes the right amount of gel directly in wrinkles and gradually fills them. Used every day for two weeks on areas that need greater volume such as the face, neck, cheeks, and lips, it reproduces the effects of an aesthetic treatment without any inconvenience. Formulated by the experts of Labo Cosprophar scientific laboratories, Fillerina is sold in pharmacies.

THE NO NEEDLE BOTOX

LOOKING TO ACHIEVE A NATURAL LOOK WITHOUT COSMETIC SURGERY OR THE USE OF PAINFUL NEEDLES? ANGELA BEITZ DISCOVERS THE NEW WAY TO ACHIEVE THIS WITH FILLERINA

Fillerina is the result of the years of research at Labor Cosmoprof. Since its invention for its expertise, high standards of clinical safety and ability to bring best-in-class products to the cosmetic industry and consumers, Fillerina has proven to be an alternative to cosmetic surgery and other injectable treatments such as Botox, by giving face volume and to rejuvenate your skin with natural ingredients.

What is the 14-Day Filler Treatment?

Although the skin is equipped with a natural defense system to fight against aging with the help of certain skin nutrients, constant sun exposure causes the skin to lose its ability to produce these nutrients and this tends to accelerate the aging process. Fortunately, Fillerina's 14-Day Filler Treatment Kit hydrates the skin while giving it a firm lift and youthful glow.

How does it work?

Made with Hyaluronic acid (HA), a type of nutrient that is naturally produced by our skin to hydrate and revitalize the skin, this non-invasive topical filler treatment has been clinically approved to provide positive filling effect by plumping our deep wrinkles and restoring youthful skin. The treatment is also formulated with another active component - Menthylol, which acts over time on the skin matrix to promote the reconstruction of the natural skin filling substances such as collagen.

How is it applied?

This DIY treatment kit comes with 3ml of gel filler and menthylol (HA cream) along with two precision applicators that allow us users to separate the areas along the problem areas of the skin. The easily absorbable formula of the product makes it capable in providing visible results within just two weeks.

How does the Fillerina Plus Day Cream work?

This daily filler treatment cream is designed to rehydrate, protect and refresh your face and neck without leaving a greasy or sticky feeling. Formulated with 1% Hyaluronic Acid (HA) molecules, as opposed to the usual 0.1% HA molecules found in the regular Fillerina treatments, Fillerina Plus Day Cream is designed to correct deep set wrinkles caused by aging. It penetrates deeply into the skin to help reduce the appearance of fine lines and leaves the skin feeling more supple and soft.

Which one is best for me?

Fillerina Plus Day Cream is available in two different dosages, Grade 4 and 5. Grade 4 is targeted for maintaining excellent hydration and softening of tones, while Grade 5 is aimed for repairing the traces of more mature skin.

How should it be applied?

For best results, apply a small amount of the cream on your face and neck with your fingertips, to let it penetrate deeply into your skin. The Fillerina Plus Day Cream is suitable for use on its own as well as in conjunction with other Fillerina treatments.

Tell us about the Lip Volume Treatment!

If you have ever dreamt about having fuller lips but can't bring yourself to go under the needle then Fillerina Lip Volume is just what you need. Using a patented blend of 0.1% hyaluronic acid, which penetrates through the layers of skin, Fillerina rehydrates, reduces wrinkles around the mouth and hydrates the lip without any invasive action. Fillerina uses a mix of hyaluronic acids of varying molecular weights for effective action and visible results.

How does it work?

The convenient gel pen spreads the patented solution evenly over your lips. Fillerina Lip Volume should be applied to clean dry lips three times a day for a month to see the best results. It can be applied up to a hour before your lipstick, but make sure you allow the gel to fully work in before applying lipstick. It can be used alone to moisturize your lips.

Utilizare La Domiciliu

SWISS PATENT
CH 705 713

FORMULĂ PATENTATĂ CU 6 TIPURI DE ACID HIALURONIC - Utilizare externă, fără ac, penetrare rapidă la nivelul epidermului

Fillerina cu efect de umplere pentru utilizare la domiciliu este un produs dermato-cosmetic de uz topic fără ac, cu absorbție rapidă, cu aplicare timp de 14 zile. Acțiunea principala este realizată de Gelul Fillerina, pe zonele cu depresiuni cutanate, cum ar fi ridurile și liniile de expresie, și la nivelul zonelor care necesită mai multă fermitate (pomeți, buze). Formula Gelului Fillerina asociază 6 tipuri diferite de acid hialuronic cu diferite structuri și mase moleculare (între 1.000 daltoni și 2.000.000 daltoni), care au o acțiune de umplere la nivelul diferitelor straturi ale pielii. Ingredientul activ Matrifill sustine trofismul țesuturilor pielii și reconstrucția substanțelor naturale de umplere pentru un efect de fermitate treptat și progresiv.

Wind of change

Alașele de primăvară au venit cu mesaje de încredere și optimism pentru modele folosite în această colecție. Cu accente de culoare, oricât și plină de viață de sanial, pică sau pur, ai de a călători în viața și în viața. Într-o lume de schimbare, avem

Alexandra Michale și-a "înarmat" modela cu valiză adresa și o doza de mister pentru prezentarea colecției sale de primăvară-veră 2017.

DOUĂ DECLARAȚII DE STIL

Pune punctul pe „și” și acordă-ți rolul principal, cu cele mai puternice accesorii ale sezonului: o palărie, dar la fel de bine și un evantai, pot să facă sau să desfacă un întreg outfit și, uneori, chiar și un destin!

Punem tocurile-n cui

Veniți bare pentru picioarele noastre avem undă verde de la designerii să se punem tocurile-n cui? Sezonul acesta este despre confort, lejertate și o eleganță subtilă, așa cum am văzut pe catwalk-urile de la Ghemul cel controversat: Croco cu lăptariți aplicate, de la Christopher Kane, sunt doar câteva exemple. Cert este că bătăliile provocate de pantofi nu vor mai fi o problemă gravă în această, odată ce mai un microtrept se acceptă, la ocazii speciale. Și, desigur, din când în când, o pereche de cizme din rășină în râm, ne lucrură să vedem provocată noțiunea de confort și să specializăm constant pentru confortul nostru.

Girl Power

Sezonul acesta feminismul și moda defilează împreună pe marile pasarelle, iar scena pare să fie pusă de și pentru femei, ceea ce nu poate decât să ne bucure!

Mesaje la purtător

Stella McCartney a dat cel mai optimist și energic ton săptămânii Modei de la Paris cu o prezentare înfuzată cu vânt bună și ritm rapid. De la coregrafia pe care au dansat modelele, până la hainele propuse, întregul colaj o emană o energie benefică, de solidaritate și liberă exprimare. Crenelile lejere, materializate responsabil și primare grație, de un tradițional al creației, au fost dublate de modele înalte în la grafica fructiferă, fiindcă vine să-l înlocuiască, pe visceri. Thelma Girls, All in Love, No fur, No Leather și fost mesajele transmise de Stella McCartney către lume, cu firul și naturalitate cu care ne-a obținut.

Miss Dior (Re)volution

Pe măsură ce dăți în cel peste 70 de ani de existență, casa de modă Dior are un designer feminin, mai precis Maria Grazia Chiuri, venită de la Valentino, urde a fi cel mai mare alături de Pierpaolo Piccioli. Rămasă pe cont propriu și cu un nume foarte greu de dat, Chiuri a lansat o colecție care îi confirmă spiritul creativ și versatil inspirată de costumul de sermă, a gândit siluete ca niște armuri, dar și mesaje ca să poată de către: We should all be feminists scria pe un top alb, pe un tricou din prezentare. Dior (Re)volution scria pe un altul, iar combinația de tragi-comedie și eleganta luptă locală scria asta: o revoluționară a esteticii casei de modă, în cheie feminină.

Miracle MOLECULES

Hyaluronic acid is getting another lease of life thanks to a new generation of moisturisers, says Nicola Moulton

Every so often a trend sweeps through the skincare world that sets the agenda for the next few years of anti-ageing products. Retinol was one. Vitamin C was one. Microdermabrasion was another. The next big thing? Face creams containing hyaluronic acid (otherwise known as HA). It's not the newest ingredient on the block but it's set to be one of the most intriguing.

Hyaluronic acid is one of those ingredients that sounds terrifying ("Acid? Near my face? No, thanks"), but the reality is far less dramatic. It's a clear, sticky, sugary substance that occurs naturally in the body, where its job is to keep things well hydrated. Almost all the big skincare companies have used it in anti-ageing creams already – but its effect has been limited because of its high "molecular weight" (meaning the molecules are so big they can't actually penetrate your skin very easily). That's where the new breakthroughs come in: this fresh batch of products represent a cocktail of HA molecules of varying molecular weights, allowing them to penetrate down to the skin's deepest layers. Once the HA is in there, it is so astonishingly good at absorbing moisture (the one fact every skincare expert tells you about hyaluronic acid is that it can absorb up to a thousand times its own weight in water) that wrinkles are plumped up and skin appears much smoother.

Forerunners of the new skincare trend include Fillerina, a 14-day dermo-cosmetic filler for at-home use, complete with syringe-style applicator; German dermatologist Dr Barbara Sturm's glass Hyaluronic Acid Ampoules that you snap open and apply directly on to deep wrinkles; and French skincare company Filorga's Hydra-Hyal Serum, which claims a 27 per cent reduction in lines after one month. Additionally, there's Pestle & Mortar's Pure Hyaluronic [Acid] Serum, and Indeed Laboratories' Hydraluron Moisture Boosting Masks, individual HA-infused sheet masks that promise up to 24 hours of slow-release moisture.

In fact, the inspiration for this new wave of targeted HA at-home wrinkle-plumping comes from the popularity it has gained as an anti-ageing injectable. "It gives the very best results," says Marcel Lützeltschwab, founder of the company behind Fillerina. "But the injections have only been around for a few years, and you really need 20 years of studies to guarantee complete safety." It's certainly one of the most potent ingredients the skincare world now has at its disposal: Dr Erich Schulte, the dermatologist behind the QMS MediCosmetics line, counsels that HA is so adept at drawing moisture into the skin from elsewhere in the body, some users can experience feelings of dehydration – and many of the products, including Fillerina, advise on their packaging that you drink extra water. Cheers to that. ■

For 100ml) and body firmers like Bakel Jalbody Radical Lifting Treatment (£80 for 150ml) to SkinCeuticals Hydrating B5 Masque (£49 for 75ml), a weekly pick-me-up for dehydrated skin. One major advantage of formulas with HA is they tend to be light and non-greasy, making them ideal for wearing under make-up or sunscreen, as well as a post-shave soother for gloop-resistant men. A recent study at Poznan University found lightly textured moisturisers, rather than heavier oil-based creams and ointments, better ensure HA absorption. "The larger the water content, the more stable formulation can be due to hygroscopic (water-absorbing) properties of hyaluronic acid," researchers concluded.

"HA's strong moisture-retentive capacity makes it an excellent temporary plumping ingredient, providing its molecular weight is small enough to penetrate the skin," confirms Dr Marko Lens, whose Zelens Z Luminous Brightening more flexible joints, each scoop of this soluble powder delivers 210mg of hydrolysed HA along with 10,000mg of collagen fragments directly to the small intestine, which absorbs them readily, unlike pills that are more complex to digest. Expect to notice the glow within six weeks. Also worth a plug is Fountain, The Beauty Molecule Extra Strength (£68 for 240ml, six weeks' supply), which combines HA with "longevity" antioxidant Resveratrol, and Beauty & Go Bioactive Beauty Drink (£3 for 250ml). Taking HA orally to benefit skin has its sceptics, yet a 2016 study published in the Nutrition Journal seems to clinch it. A daily oral intake of 120mg of HA in capsule form significantly increased skin moisture for people with dry skin, it concluded.

Can this miracle molecule do no wrong? "Hyaluronic acid has benefits that we still don't understand fully and have yet to exploit," muses Dhillon. "It's the most exciting ingredient in skincare and we've only scratched the surface." The acid test may yet be surpassed. +

Accessing depths that even the needle can't reach, nutraceutical tipples are taking "beauty from within" to literal limits to boost hydration

Serum (£135 for 130ml) contains sodium hyaluronate (the salt of HA), which sinks in easily. The advent of multiweight molecules has inspired some companies to take a belt-and-braces approach for serums that aim to plump the skin's upper layers with high-weight molecules, while targeting fibroblasts in the deeper dermis with low-weight HA to stimulate home-grown production. Anise Semonin Precious Pearl Youth Radiance Elixir (£250 for 40ml), exclusive to Harrods, instantly firms the surface with high-weight HA pearls suspended in a low-weight, deeply plumping serum.

"Syringed" onto skin by a dose-specific micro-needle that does not actually penetrate skin, Fillerina (from £38) is a 14-day treatment combining six grades of HA to plump cheeks and lips, while softening lines. Lips seem to respond most fully, but the 10-minute wait for the gel to sink in is tedious. Not so Perricone MD Hyalo Plasma (£110 for 30ml), a gel with a triple-HA formula that plumps, minimises wrinkles and leaves skin exquisitely smooth and dewy. Equally silken is Teoxane Cosmeceuticals RHA Serum (£79 for 30ml) from the Teosyal skincare range, formulated to complement its fillers. Teoxane RHA R[1] Eyes (£49 for 15ml) and Prep Cleansing Solution (£21 for 200ml) are also worth trying. A joy to use is BioEffect EGF Day Serum (£110 for 30ml), a moisturising version of the popular EGF Serum (£125 for 15ml), with firming epidermal growth factors extracted from greenhouse-grown Icelandic barley. "HA works in synergy with EGF, giving an instant moisturising effect, while EGF slowly builds the skin's ability to retain moisture," says BioEffect's scientist/ founder Björn Orvar. The results are palpably firming. A few drops of a simple HA serum can also transform regular creams into super-moisturisers, or offset the drying effects of prescription Retinol. Susanne Kaufmann Hyaluron Serum (£105 for 30ml), Dr Gabriela Magic Beauty Face Lift Serum (£207 for 30ml) and Paula's Choice Resist Hyaluronic Acid Booster (£42 for 20ml) all fit the bill.

Having slathered it on, why not consider sipping it? Accessing depths that even the needle can't reach, nutraceutical tipples are taking "beauty from within" to literal limits in Japan, where a third of look-friendly oral supplements contain HA. In the UK, Tonks recommends her clients drink Aneva Derma Skin Beverage (£110 for 360g, 30 days' supply), to boost hydration and improve the results of fillers. Originally a medical supplement for osteoarthritis patients who began to notice plumper, more glowing skin as well

From top: SkinCeuticals Hydrating B5 Masque, £49 for 75ml; Susanne Kaufmann Hyaluron Serum, £105 for 30ml; Teoxane Cosmeceuticals RHA R[1] Eyes, £49 for 15ml; Fillerina Dermo-Cosmetic Gel Filler and Nourishing Filler, £79 for 2ml of each £60 for four, £180 for 16), a device that pressure-steam HA into the skin's surface. During this two-phase, two-minute treatment developed by cosmetic specialist Dr Daniel Sister, the serum in the first podlet steam-cleans skin, before the second mists it with a mix of vitamins, minerals and HA – 20 minutes later skin is visibly plumper and lines seem finer. In trials, 57 per cent of testers reported firmer-feeling skin after the first session. For optimum results, which also include tighter pores and brighter skin, 10 sessions are recommended: twice weekly in the first fortnight, then once a week.

Treatments like these bridge the gulf between clinic and bathroom, while exploiting skincare's fast-growing "power-tool" trend. But there's good news on the strictly cosmetics shelves too. Whereas in the past topically applied HA molecules were considered too big to penetrate beyond the skin's upper layers, they can now be engineered to reach at least the epidermal/dermal junction where new cells proliferate. And so HA now fosters plumper, firmer skin right through from exfoliators such as Goldfaden MD Doctor's Scrub (£65

Plump up the volume

Skin that loses its elasticity and sags is far more ageing than the odd wrinkle, crow's feet or smattering of age spots, but you don't have to resort to facelifts or fillers to sort it. Recent developments in 3D imaging mean that skincare brands can now analyse the effects of their products in all dimensions, which has led to an exciting new slew of lifting, plumping and tightening formulations hitting the beauty counters.

• Collagen and elastin are the two proteins that give your skin its structure and elasticity. Think of your skin like a mattress, with collagen as the stuffing and elastin as the springs. If your elastin gets damaged (sun exposure being the major culprit), your skin starts to sag. Combine that with a loss in skin's 'stuffing' (you lose collagen at a rate of about 1% a year from the age of 25), and it's easy to see why things begin to head south.

• Before you grab the first face cream that has 'collagen' on the pot, take note: collagen and elastin molecules are far too large to penetrate your skin, so there's no point applying them topically. Instead, look for products containing ingredients like retinoids, AHAs and peptides, which coax your body to produce more collagen and elastin itself. surface, where all the real work goes on). A semi-permanent lip gloss of sorts, this will set you back $400.

'Lips are big business,' says Emma Grace Bailey, associate beauty editor at global trend-forecasting company WGSN. 'While some might opt for the more permanent minority of fillers, brands are also realising the need for less invasive solutions. Treatment-based formulas have been appearing on the market over the past few months, targeting those looking for temporary enhancements. These include Verso's Lip Serum, which contains Retinol 8 and stabilised vitamin A, and Dr Brandt's 3D Lip Pump Fix, which helps stimulate fat cells to maintain and enhance fullness.' Delivering clever concepts for an equally savvy consumer.

And if needles, short-term plumping products and wishful thinking aren't your thing, there's always make-up. The easiest trick in the book is a reflective gloss or pearlescent highlighter in the centre of the lips and atop the Cupid's bow - attracting light to all the right places. Dior's new Rouge Dior Double Rouge Lipsticks do the job for you by tracing the outer edge of lips with a deeper shade and the inside with a complementary pop of lighter metallic. 'It all comes down to the right colour combinations of matte and metallic, of which we tried hundreds,' explains their creator and Dior Make-Up's creative and image director, Peter Philips.

Volume and fullness are most frequently top of the lip wish list, but there's another, more surprising element of the lip movement that's only just beginning to enter the conversation: lip reduction. In the same report from the American Society of Plastic Surgeons, figures revealed that lip-reduction surgery is dramatically on the rise - with an increase of 283% from 2015 to 2016, covering 3,547 operations in the US alone.

Unlike hyaluronic acid lip fillers - which the body can easily break down over a period of four to six months - this procedure is invasive, irreversible and requires local anaesthesia. Certainly not something to be taken lightly, it involves removing skin from the wet/dry border of the lips (or vermilion), before stitches are used to create a new lip line and shape. Aside from decreasing size, patients can opt for reduction to help remove insoluble permanent fillers gone wrong (entirely different to your standard injectable filler).

You need only to search #LipReduction on Instagram to see nearly 6,000 posts dedicated to before and after results. Although not entirely new - Thailand-based dermatologist Dr Nuttawee Nattapong confirms the popularity of lip fillers in Asia around five to 10 years ago - it's the wider and escalating appeal that's significant. Our obsession with lips goes far beyond the Kylie aesthetic, but to what end?

Throughout history, women's relationship with their own beauty standards has been tumultuous - and that includes lips. Beauty ideals are ever changing and, while we may not know what the future of our face looks, it's clear that - for now at least - lip alteration is on the cosmetic agenda more than ever before, as is the conversation around it. Bigger, plumper, snicker, glossier - we clearly want our mouths to make a statement before we actually open our lips. Let's just make sure it's a positive one.

FILLER FAQs

Tempted by lip fillers but want the facts first? Dr Frances Prenna Jones answers Google's most-searched questions.

WHAT ARE THEY?

The filler itself is made up of a hyaluronic acid molecule, which is a naturally occurring compound in the body that attracts water and can hold up to 1,000 times its own weight. Injected, this results in a plumper, fuller lip effect.

CAN ANYONE GET THEM?

For fillers, Botox and both invasive and non-invasive procedures, patients need to be aged 18. Plus, no clinical studies have ever proven that it's OK to undergo treatment while pregnant, when fluctuating hormones make it more difficult to predict results.

HOW LONG DO THEY LAST?

It depends on the product, the patient and a number of other factors. As a ballpark figure, the first treatment should last four to six months, and after that can be anything from nine months plus.

WHAT'S THE HEALING TIME?

There is no healing as such, although swelling might occur in a few cases for 24 to 48 hours. Most patients see the end result on the same day with very little swelling, as long as they've been to a reputable practitioner. If swelling should occur, we use ice cubes wrapped in gauze to cool the area to prevent bruising and help reduce swelling.

WHAT DO THEY COST?

It varies depending on the practitioner and product, but you can expect to pay anything from £250 to beyond £1,500. You should think of it a little like a haircut - you are paying for the expertise of the practitioner rather than the actual product.

WHAT IF YOU'RE NOT HAPPY WITH THE RESULTS?

Go back as soon as possible to reverse the result. We use an enzyme that instantly dissolves the filler, returning your lips to their natural shape and form.

will be available across the country next month.) Microdroplets of low-viscosity hyaluronic acid—meaning the product has a more fluid texture than traditional hyaluronic-acid fillers—are injected closer to the surface of the skin than a typical filler. “It’s good for someone who doesn’t need volume but wants to improve the elasticity, smoothness and appearance of their skin,” says Kellett, who has also had success using it to treat the neck and the backs of hands. POTENTIAL RISKS & SIDE EFFECTS Temporary bruising and puffiness.

THE LIPO ALTERNATIVE SculpSure is a laser treatment that removes fat in the body by heating cells to the point of rupture (between 42°C and 47°C) over a 25-minute treatment. “It’s not liposuction, but it’s the best non-surgical, predictable way to kill fat that I know of,” says Dr. Stephen Mulholland, who has been working with the non-invasive, no-downtime device for over two years. The SculpSure machine has four lasers that penetrate to a depth of about 2.5 centimetres, treating up to 24 to 30 percent of superficial fat—that’s about one to three centimetres of reduction in the squishy zone. (In Canada, it’s currently approved for use on the abdomen, hips and thighs.) Once destroyed by the lasers, fat cells are released into the body, where they are filtered out through the kidneys or liver after about six weeks. The lasers operate at a wavelength that is not attracted to melanin; they pass through the skin to fat (a topical chiller ensures that skin remains cool at all times—though do expect to feel some warmth during the treatment) making the procedure safe for all skin tones. At his Toronto office, Mulholland offers a treatment he calls “DoubleSure” that involves two devices—that’s eight lasers—working simultaneously. “In less than an hour, you can treat that entire annoying fat layer,” he says. POTENTIAL RISKS & SIDE EFFECTS About 5 percent of patients experience walnut-size nodules (small inflamed clumps of fat in the treated area) that will disappear within weeks. Patients also need to be realistic about what can be achieved, he adds. □

“Technology has developed so well that we can achieve surgical-like results,” says Chantal Ward, a registered nurse and clinical director at Toronto’s Clarity Spa, of noninvasive treatments. And with the newest treatments requiring less downtime, there’s more potential for combination therapies that reach skin at various layers, netting a more natural finish. A typical example of an anti-aging program that targets everything from skin texture to sagging would start with Ultherapy, which Ward says is the foundation of a younger, firmer face. The once-a-year treatment taps ultrasonic energy to lift and tighten deep layers of skin, while prompting a collagen response and continuous freshen and firming on the face and neck. From there, Ultherapy can be—and often is—combined with intracutaneous-needling, a process in which a wand with dozens of tiny needles is placed into the skin’s dermal (second from top) layer before a radio-frequency is transmitted, this is then repeated across the face. It can be used on all skin types and treats large pores, scars and photo-aging as well as crepey and lax skin. It’s considered comfortable compared to its painful predecessor, the fractional laser. (And downtime is up to two hours versus a fractional week or two.) Ward says she commonly combines these therapies with fillers, neuromodulators (like Botox) and intense pulsed light.

SKIN DEEP

A Natural Smoother Gets a Boost

Hyaluronic acid, in new formulations, shows promise of being more effective.

By COURTNEY RUBIN
After spending hours on airplanes to help run her family's photography business, Sonia Deasy was desperate for a quick solution to her dehydrated skin. "I'm a mother of five," Ms. Deasy said. "I don't have time for a fuss."

So Ms. Deasy, who lives in Dublin, enlisted her sister, a biochemist, to help make a hyaluronic acid serum. Within a week of its release last year, the product, Pestle & Mortar Pure Hyaluronic Serum, sold out.

Cameron Silver, who owns Decades, a vintage boutique in Los Angeles, described the serum as being "like Xanax for your skin: it kind of takes the edge off." Mr. Silver, who often appears on television, added: "It's like Vaseline around the lens. It just makes the skin a little bit smoother, a little bit dewier."

Hyaluronic acid — a clear, sugary goo that occurs naturally in the body, where it lubricates joints and even sustains the shape of the eyeballs — is not a new beauty product. Dermatologists have long touted its plumping and moisturizing ability because it can carry up to 1,000 times its weight in water. Its downside: The molecules were too big to penetrate the skin's surface (scientists call this high molecular weight), so results could easily be washed away.

But new formulations have solved that problem, potentially making them more effective and with longer-lasting results. Products like La Prairie's eight-month-old Anti-Aging Rapid Response Booster and Eve Lom's Brightening Mask, coming in February, offer a cocktail of molecules at lower weights, which can make their way into lower layers of skin.

Once there, there is evidence that they may stimulate collagen growth, said Dr. S. Tyler Hollmig, the director of laser and aesthetic dermatology at Stanford University. (Further research and publication in peer-reviewed journals would be needed for him to change that "may" to a "can," he said.) Fillerina, a 14-day topical treatment designed to mimic a filler (only without the needle), includes six different weights of hyaluronic acid molecules that scientists spent six years testing. "The largest molecules give good plumping of the skin in the outer layer," said Manuela Guglielmo, the director of marketing for the Italian company Labo, which makes Fillerina. "The smaller ones go deeper." (The big molecules are better at moisturizing, hence the need for both.) A study published in the 2014 Journal of Cosmetic Dermatology showed that Fillerina measurably reduced wrinkle depth and skin sagging, and increased lip and cheek volume. The study, whose length was 30 days, did not address collagen growth, as collagen takes at least six weeks to form. Similarly, studies of La Prairie Anti-Aging Rapid Response Booster and Kane NY Serum Savant, which have lower-weight molecules, showed that they measurably improved skin at the two- and four-week mark; but they, too, did not measure collagen growth. (Kane NY's study was done independently; La Prairie's wasn't.) Dr. Barbara Sturm, a dermatologist in Düsseldorf, Germany, recently introduced hyaluronic acid ampuls, available on Net-a-Porter, that you snap open and apply directly to deep wrinkles.

"It's like a therapeutic serum: It has a long-term effect," said Dr. Sturm, who created the product in part because she wanted her patients to be able to apply it at home after more-invasive procedures. "It's not just, 'I apply my skin-care product and tomorrow I have to do it again because the effect is gone.'"

Tiffany Masterson, the founder of the skin-care company Drunk Elephant, uses a bioengineered form of hyaluronic acid that she says breaks down more slowly, "so it can be delivered over longer periods of time." Ms. Masterson is so pleased with the ingredient, which she offers in a serum, that next year she will include it in two new products, her Hydra B Vitamin Gel and Lala Day Cream.

The consumer appeal of hyaluronic acid is that it's a natural component of skin — "People like it because it's not foreign," Dr. Hollmig said — and it is turning up in a baffling array of products, though not all are created equal. (How to tell what grade of hyaluronic acid is in a product? You can't, unless companies choose to tell you; they are required only to list ingredients.)

"Ten years ago you only saw hyaluronic acid in a few high-end moisturizers," said Randy Schueller, a cosmetic chemist who founded thebeautybrains.com, a website and podcast where scientists examine skin-care ingredients and industry claims. "Now you see it even in powdered makeup, which is kind of ridiculous."

That's because hyaluronic acid absorbs moisture, so if there is an appreciable amount in a powder, the product is more likely to clump. Cosmetic powders in general are not a good delivery system for moisturizing and anti-aging ingredients because they are not applied all over the face, and they do not provide a uniform coating, he said.

If you choose just one product, Mr. Schueller suggested that a serum was best. They traditionally have the highest levels of hyaluronic acid, he said, "so in that sense they give you the most bang for your buck."
